These are some “old bones” that you are sitting in. Speakeasy, located in this historic Kreisle Building, which was built in the 1870’s, has been continuously serving up great live music and classic cocktails since 1997.

On July 26, 1916, the then three-story building caught on fire (check out this picture. It’s late July and they are wearing 3-piece wool suits!) and it sustained substantial damage. Tragically, James “Jimmy” Glass, an Austin Firefighter, and two women unable to escape from the elevator, lost their lives that day. That elevator still sits at the front of the building next to the front windows. The building was rebuilt as a two-story building and has been haunted ever since. Jimmy Glass’ badge number? 13.

In the late 1960’s and early 1970’s the Army/Navy Surplus store operated out of the building. After that, Oscar Snowden Appliances occupied the building. Then, in 1997, the legendary drinking establishment you are currently sitting in was established. Cheers to that!

Alongside the addition of Speakeasy to the Kreisle Building, famed Director Richard Linklater of Dazed and Confused fame established a state-of-the-art viewing and editing facility called the Austin Film Center on the 2nd floor. To that, we say....alright, alright, alright. The 2nd floor now houses The Ballroom at Speakeasy, our 700 person capacity event and concert room.

The Kreisle Building is a City of Austin Historic Landmark and contributes to the National Register-listed Congress Avenue Historic District.

Austin Texas, baby!
